

THE 50 UNIVERSAL LAWS

This is an explanation of The 50 Universal Laws. The Universe is perfectly balanced by natural and moral laws, which are regulatory vibrations to maintain order. When we operate within the laws, we can be assured of eventual positive outcomes. When we operate outside of the laws, suffering occurs. The purpose of the laws is to teach a harmonious way to live, which will be in alignment with the greater good for all, individually and collectively.

Together we can create heaven on earth. Think of The 50 Universal Laws as an operating manual for how to bring a joyful, loving, abundant and fulfilling reality into manifestation.

1. The law of harmony

Harmony is the supreme potential of balance. This law supersedes the fundamental law of Karma. The purpose of Karma is to attain harmony. If you through a rock into a pond you disturb the harmony of the pond. You are the cause and the effect is the splash and the ripples that flow out and back until harmony is restored. Similarly, your disharmonious actions flow out into the Universe and back upon you, lifetime after lifetime, until eventually your own harmony is restored. As you experience your life, you and the entire Universe are experiencing the karmic ripples, which will eventually result in harmony. Once you live an entire lifetime in harmony you are free from the wheel of reincarnation.

2. The law of reincarnation and Karma

Until you have resolved your Karma and fulfilled your Dharma, which are the deeds you must do, you will continue to reincarnate into sequential lifetimes upon earth. Neither God nor the Lords of Karma bestows suffering upon you during these lives. You and you alone decide what you need to learn. In each life experience, you seek out other souls, often with shared histories, and always with Karmic configurations matching your needs. Whenever you act with intention you create Karma. Actions are considered to be thoughts, emotions, words and deeds, and the motive, desire and intent behind each. Disharmonious acts must be balanced in the future, in this life or in a future lifetime, in order to ensure soul growth.

Disharmonious acts are rooted in fear-based emotions, which must be resolved before you can release yourself from the wheel of reincarnation. You return lifetime after lifetime to test yourself, to see if you have learned your lessons. Until you can go through an entire lifetime with no disharmonious attachment whatsoever, you will continue to reincarnate. In other words, when you can live a life of perfect harmony, liberation will follow.

3. The law of Wisdom. Wisdom erases Karma

If you have the wisdom to learn your lessons, you can mitigate your suffering. Unfortunately, many seem to learn the fastest through pain and through directly experiencing the consequences of their actions. As an example, if you greedily take from others, instead of learning through wisdom and love that this is wrong, you have to experience someone greedily taking from you, whether later in this life or in a future lifetime. When you move toward a predestined test in your life, if you have the wisdom to proceed with harmony you will surely mitigate the traumatic impact of the event.

Here are a few examples:

1. In your last life, you were married to a soul who is your mate today, and whom you cruelly left for another in that previous lifetime. Before you were born into your current life, you agreed to be left by your mate, under similar circumstances. This will allow you to balance your Karma and directly experience the pain of abandonment.

Through the wisdom of Master-Life-Awareness, it is easier to detach consciously from the relationship with love, you will ease the pain of parting while also passing your own test, and thus absolving Karma and evolve from within.

2. Assume that you have astrologically destined a severe relationship test for May of your 35th year. If you have learnt through past-life awareness as well as present life learning, to be positive, non-judgemental and without expectations on your relationship, you may only experience an argument with your mate on that fateful day in May. However, if you haven't learnt your past lessons and have intensified the disharmony during a relationship, you might experience a divorce in May of your 35th year.

3. In several past lives, you were so proud that you were unwilling to accept any assistance from others. Pride is fear, so in this life, you astrologically predestined an event which caused you to be institutionalized for many years. On a soul level, you decided you needed to create circumstances which would force you to subdue your pride and allow others to give to you. But if you act from wisdom in this life, you will override your pride and open your heart and gladly accept assistance from others. Because of this, you will not have to be institutionalized to learn your lesson. Wisdom will have erased the Karma.

4. The law of grace

Karma can be experienced in the law of grace. In other words, if you give love, mercy and grace to others, you will receive the same in return.

Here are a couple of examples:

1. You have destined a future event where you will be the victim of slander and gossip to ruin your career. But in the years preceding this event you have become so kind and loving to other human beings, it is obvious to your higher self, that you have learnt your needed lessons. So, the predestined event will be mitigated, having little or no effect upon you.

2. In a previous life, you were a person of great wealth, which you used selfishly for your own and your family's indulgence. In this life, you destined yourself to experience monetary needs, but you were so giving with the little you have, that you released yourself from the self-imposed bondage and once again rose monetarily. Always share what you have with those in need.

5. The law of soul evolution

Everyone on earth shares the goal of Soul evolution whether they realize it or not. We have reincarnated because we desire to evolve spiritually. By rising above all of our fear-based emotions and in doing so learn how to express unconditional love, we raise our vibrational rate and move closer to a state of harmony. Even where it appears that we are not evolving we are in reality making progress. We learn through the pain of our disharmonious acts, which can be viewed as our mistakes or failures. This is the law of Soul evolution. If you fell off a bicycle 9 times before you learn to ride it on the 10th attempt, this means you needed 9 failures to achieve your final success. In reality, every failure is a small success, bringing you closer to accomplishing your goal.

6. The law of the bodhisattva

Bodhisattva is a Sanskrit term commonly accepted by most metaphysical adepts today. It means one who has transcended the need of earthly incarnations but who has chosen to return to the earth to support others in achieving enlightenment. A Bodhisattva knows he will never really be free until all souls are free. Most serious students of metaphysics have entered the Bodhisattva development stage of their evolution.

7. The law of vibrational attainment

The entire Universe operates on the same principle of vibrational energy. When Einstein discovered that matter is energy, he opened the door to merging science and metaphysics. The scientists have proved that energy cannot disappear, it can only transform (reincarnate). By its very nature, energy must go forward or backwards resulting in transformation, it cannot stand still, for to do so is stagnation. You are energy. Your skin, which appears solid, is actually trillions of swiftly moving molecules orbiting each other at a specific vibrational rate. A physical life rate is earned in the past as a result of how harmoniously or disharmoniously you have lived your past lives and your current life up until this moment in time. When you are harmonious for a lifetime, you will have attained the highest vibrational rate - the God level.

8. The law of free will

The law of free will operates in three ways:

1. Although many of the major events in your life are Astrologically predestined, you always have free will to mitigate the impact of the event, or to transcend it entirely. This will result from how you live your life up to the situation you have destined for yourself to experience. If you give grace and mercy to others, are positive, loving, compassionate, and demonstrate by your actions that you have learned the past lessons, you can minimize disharmonious experiences.

2. As you obtain Master of life awareness and develop conscious detachment, you will be far less affected by worldly events than in the past. A Master of Life enjoys all the warmth and joy that life has to offer but detaches from the negativity by allowing it to flow through him without affecting him.

3. You always have free will in how you respond to any situation. If you respond with positive emotions, compassion, and integrity, you have probably learned your karmic lessons and will not have to experience a similar situation in the future.

9. The law of one

Every soul, living and discarnate, is connected at the level of the collective unconscious, deep within the Higher-Self. We are all part of a great energy gestalt called God, and because we are part of God, we are God. It is the goal of the gestalt to move the energy forward, creating more energy. So, in living harmoniously, we each increase our vibrational rate and intensify the vibration of the entire gestalt. When we are disharmonious, we decrease the vibration of the entire gestalt. Because we are one, everything you think, say and do, affects every other soul.

10. The law of manifestation

Every manifestation begins as a thought, an idea. Ideas and experiences create beliefs which in turn, create your reality. If you are unhappy with your current reality, you can change your beliefs and your behaviour. Recognize the beliefs which are not working for you and you and begin programming what will create success and harmony in your life.

The unlimited creative power of your mind, through dedication, awareness, and training, can be the wisdom you need to rise above your Karma. Within physical and spiritual laws, you can manifest any reality you desire to experience. In regards to changing your behaviour, you must decide which disharmonious behaviour(s) you want to eliminate. You don't have to change how you feel about something to affect it, simply be willing to change what you are doing.

11. Law of conscience detachment

Buddha's earthly teachings are best summarized with one of his statements: "It is your resistance to what is that causes your suffering". By suffering, he meant everything that doesn't work in your life; relationship problems, loss of loved ones, loneliness, sickness, accidents, guilt, monetary hardship, unfulfilled desires, and so on. When you accept what is, you accept the unalterable realities in your life without resisting them. Some things are facts. They exist, and no matter how much you resist them, there is nothing you are going to be able to do about them.

Change what you can change but have the wisdom to accept unalterable situations as they are, without wasting mental or physical energy attempting to change what you cannot change. Out of acceptance comes involved detachment. The ability to enjoy all the positive aspects of life, but to allow the negative to flow through you without resistance.

12. The law of gratitude

From the perspective of Karma and the Law of One, the more you give, the more you will receive. The more you assist others, the more you will assist yourself. The power of this Law also works in your day-to-day life.

13. The law of fellowship

When two or more people of similar vibration are gathered for a shared purpose, their combined energy directed to the attainment of that purpose is doubled, tripled, quadrupled or more. This esoteric awareness has been used by associations, esoteric religions, healing groups, and recently, worldwide meditations for world peace.

14. The law of resistance

That which you resist you draw to you, and you will perpetuate its influence upon your life. Resistance is fear, so it is something you need to Karmically resolve. The Law of Resistance assures that you let go of the fear by encountering it until you are forced to deal with it by learning conscious detachment.

Here are a couple of examples:

1. You're extremely resistant towards your mother-in-law, resulting in constant conflicts with her. When you attain Master of life awareness and stop resisting her, by consciously detaching from the negativity, the problem will be resolved. Most disharmonious situations are solved through a change in viewpoint. By changing your perspective, you can usually eliminate the effects of a problem. If you no longer are affected by the problem, you no longer have a problem.
2. Another aspect of the law of resistance states: That which you resist, you become. If not in this lifetime, in a future reincarnation. Your resistance is fear and the quickest way to overcome fear is to directly experience what you find so fearful.

15. The law of attraction

"Where your attention goes, your energy flows." You attract what you are and that which you concentrate upon. If you are negative, you draw in and experience negativity. If you are loving, you draw in and experience love. You can attract to you only those qualities you possess. So, if you want peace and harmony in your life, you must become peaceful and harmonious.

16. The law of reflection

This law says that what you see in others, you also recognise in yourself, both positive and negative.

It has four primary manifestations:

1. That which you admire in others, you recognise as existing within yourself

2. That which you resist and react to strongly in others is sure to be found within yourself
3. That which you resist and react to in others is something which you are afraid exists within you; and,
4. That which you resist in yourself, you will dislike in others.

In other words, you have chosen to incarnate upon the manifest plane to learn to rise above the effects of fear. Those fears will always be reflected in your reactions to others. Thus, your goals are very obvious once you recognise how to perceive them. As you let go of the fear, you automatically open to expressing more of unconditional love.

17. The law of unconditional love

The expression of unconditional love will eventually result in harmony. Unconditional love is not romantic love. It is the acceptance of others as they are without judgment or expectations. It is total acceptance of others without attempting to change them, except by our own positive example. The law of unconditional love says “If you go out of your way to express unconditional love, you automatically rise above fear, and, as you transcend your fears, you automatically open to the expression of unconditional love.”

18. The law of magnetic affinities

By astrologically choosing the time and place of your birth, you determine the nature of the effects you will experience in your life. On the other side, before we are born, we make decisions about the lifetime we will be entering into. You chose your parents, other souls to interact with you, and the astrological configurations of your birth which determine your character, personality, abilities, restrictions, and timing for strengths and weaknesses.

19. The law of abundance

You have within yourself everything required to make your earthly incarnation a paradise if you choose to accept that which is your divine birthright. We live in a Universe of abundance, although the majority of those populating our planet appear to view it as a Universe of scarcity. By expanding your awareness and trusting that everything and anything is possible, the Universe will begin to deliver you the situations, people and tools you need to create the life you desire.

20. Law of divine order

If you seek to understand the law of divine order, study the natural balance of nature, for it works the same way. Everything is as it should be, although mankind is far from experiencing its potential of total harmony. There are no accidents. Your energy, translated into thoughts, words, emotions, and deeds, causes all of your experiences. This assures that you always have the learning opportunities you require to resolve your Karma, and, as with you, the collective thoughts, words, emotions, and deeds of mankind create the environment for us all. If enough souls focus their energy upon peace, we will have peace. If the majority of souls are filled with anger, we may all have to experience war. We are all one and like the many subpersonalities within you, the dominant traits of mankind will emerge to resolve our group Karma. If one group of people emanate fear and take action from that frequency, disharmony occurs. If another emanate love and takes action from that frequency, harmony takes place. One is directing the energy into disharmony, the other in the harmony. Hopefully at least one can cancel out the other. If we cannot attain harmony, maybe we can balance the disharmony.

21. The law of attitude

Nothing in the Universe can harm you but your own attitude. It is your attitude that moves you toward events and experiences and it's your attitude that will worsen or lighten any event. You and you alone choose your attitude. No two people respond to the same situation in the same way. Every earthly incarnation includes traumatic experiences, and the better you understand the workings of Karma, the more likely you will be to put events in a spiritual perspective.

22. The law of three

Two is generally recognized as positive and negative and becomes a Law only when combined with a neutralizing force. When three, become a unit, neither of the original two are more powerful or larger, and each behaves for itself and the benefit of the whole. Examples are: The Trinity of Father, Son and Holy Ghost; Conscious Mind, Subconscious Mind and Superconscious Mind; Mother, Father and Child. When a man and a woman are combined in a neutralized state of marriage, they become a three.

23. Law of association

If two or more units have something in common, the commonality can be used to influence or control the other thing. The amount of control depends on the degree of commonality. The more common they both are the more influence.

For example: If you pray while holding a Bible, you will be more likely to experience a spiritual connectedness; A Bible and prayer share a commonality. As another example, proper diet and exercise share the mental commonality of perceived good health, which is more likely to manifest as a result of your assumption.

24. The law of commitment

When you become clear on your intent, making a decision and obligating yourself to a task or a belief, everything begins to fall into place - if your direction is in Harmony with the Universe as it relates to your purpose. Once you do this, things begin to happen almost magically, as if you were a magnet drawing into your experience that which is needed for manifestation. The key to this power is to have no indecisiveness at all, and the greater your emotional desire the more power you will give to those on the other side who can assist you, and the more rapidly the manifestation.

25. The law of dissonance

Dissonance occurs when you hold two conflicting beliefs or when your actions don't align with your beliefs. A few examples being: you believe that smoking is bad for your health, yet you continue to smoke. You believe the extramarital affairs are morally wrong and yet you continue to be involved with someone other than your partner. You believe that you should be a more patient parent, but you continue to yell at your children. The law says that when your beliefs and actions are incompatible you will attempt to reduce the resulting discomfort by changing either your actions or your beliefs. A smoker will become an ex-smoker, or he will deny or rationalize the health threat. The affair stops or you rationalize your actions, e.g. "Maybe by saying what my husband doesn't know won't hurt him and besides, with my needs more fulfilled I am a better wife". The impatient parent changes his or her behaviour or rationalize as it by saying it's better to yell and release the anger than to repress it. The law of dissonance is sometimes called the law of self-delusion. Dissonance creates disharmony. By aligning your thoughts and actions, with the best interest of all at heart, harmony is reintroduced.

26. The law of experience

When new information enters your mind, it destroys the previous information of a similar nature. Once a pathway of information has been established in your brain, that viewpoint will prevail unless new information comes in to replace it.

As an example: You go horseback riding and you fall off and hurt yourself. If that's the end of your experience with horses, your experience has been programmed negatively. That's why instructors always urge new riders to climb immediately back up after falling off. You need fresh new input to erase the trauma of the fall. The law is an innate organic process that does not require your conscious attention or active participation. It suggests that the basic processes of the brain are in an endless state of growth and reorganization. The law of experience can be used effectively to program your mind because your subconscious can not tell the difference between a fantasized experience and a real experience. As an example: If you always feel extreme anxiety in crowds, in an altered state you could vividly imagine yourself perfectly relaxed in a crowd of people. Your mind will accept this as a reality and invoke the law of experience. After a few days, weeks, or months of this programming, your mind will have experienced being calm in crowds and it will carry it over into your personal reality.

27. The law of fearful confrontation

This Law states that if you fear doing something, yet have the courage to do it anyway, you will soon do a mental flip-flop and may even become addicted to doing it. If you force yourself to do something you are afraid of, the experience generates the internal release of beta-endorphins. These internally manufactured opiates chemically resemble opium and are quite addicting. For example, if you have a fear of public speaking, if you speak in public, with time, you will realise that public speaking is a safe activity and can, in fact, be quite rewarding. The feel-good hormones resulting the exposure facilitates to rewire your brain to enjoy the experience and you are more likely to want to continue to participate in public speaking.

28. The law of group consciousness

Every one of us is part of a great energy gestalt and connected on the level of the collective unconscious. Each individual aspect of the gestalt has its own electrical system, its own vibrational frequency, and interacts with all other aspects. We are all electrically connected to one another, and to a central point. On a higher self or psychic level, it is possible for anyone to tune into anyone else, and to draw upon the awareness of the entire gestalt. Like the concept of the hundredth monkey effect, mankind takes advancing steps when group consciousness reaches a critical mass, and new awareness is accepted by the whole.

29. The law of personal return

This law is another way to view Karma and some people prefer this perspective. The law of personal return highlights that if you think negatively of someone, or send hateful thoughts to them, then the thoughts may harm the person. But in due course, the thoughts will return to the sender. The same is true of disharmonious deeds. But the good news is the law of personal return also works in reverse. Positive thoughts, words, and deeds will be returned to the sender.

30. The law of activity

Action is the result of thought and part of a triad. Every thought produces an alchemical process in your consciousness which results in motive, intent, or desire, which results in action. The union of thought and desire are necessary for action and the action will redeem the karmic implications.

31. The law of denial

When you refuse to deal with a highly emotional issue or refuse to take responsibility for an unpleasant situation, you avoid living up to your potential. Such things can be put off for lifetimes, but the effect will be experienced mentally, physically, or as a lifestyle manifestation, until you correctly balance the situation.

32. The law of New Beginnings

For each of us in our time, there is major life turning points. There is a break in the energy-wave patterns and a complete change will result. Everything is affected by this change and flux; some things to a lesser degree than others.

Examples would be:

1. A traumatic situation or tragedy such as the death of a loved one
2. A religious conversion
3. A point in therapy when something clicks and from that time on the patient begins to get well
4. A mother giving birth to a baby.

Change is inevitable.

33. The law of compensation

You and you alone are responsible for everything that happens to you. All is the result of your past thoughts, words, and deeds, and which have formed your present attitude. Your attitude towards life and life experiences is returned to you in the form of rewards or problems. As love and joy, or as confusion, trouble and heart-breaking experience. These Karmic rewards or punishments can be delivered immediately, at a later date in your present life, or in a future incarnation.

34. The law of psychosomatic influence

Two things-- animate or inanimate--once in contact with each other, will continue to act upon each other even at a distance, long after the actual contact has been severed. Matter coming into contact with other matter absorbs and influences as a result of the contact. There is a psychometric blending of the etheric emanations. For example, a person wearing a piece of inherited jewellery will be influenced by the psychosomatic emanations of the original owner. The more emphatic that she is, the more likely she will be, to be influenced by the state of mind of the original owner. Another example when the contact takes place between two people, the intensity of the contact will dictate the degree and duration of the influence. A sexual union would result in a lengthy mental connection of the two people even if they did not see each other ever again. Neither might recognize this consciously, but on an unconscious level contact and influence continues.

35. The law of totality

Each part of totality has its own characteristics and takes on the characteristics of the totality as a sum of its parts. Each part has two functions; to retain its own characteristics and to function as part of the totality. When separated, each part remains connected to the totality, and because it retains the characteristics of the totality, it can perform as the totality. You may not just have realized this yet, but since you are part of God you contain the potential to perform as God. This law is also expressed as the Law of One.

36. The law of dominant desire

A stronger emotion will always dominate a weaker one. Every idea you perceive is the beginning of a manifestation (although not all ideas are expressed in reality). It doesn't matter which idea you consciously favour, or even know to be desirable, the stronger emotion will nullify the weaker one, and the strongest emotion will begin to permeate all aspects of your activities. As an example: If you are emotionally focused upon the sexual desirability of a particular person, you may begin to create circumstances in many life areas, which will increase the likelihood of an eventual sexual union.

37. The law of duality

The Universe and all energy functions as a yin - yang balance, resulting in tension between the opposites. Yin is negative; yang is positive. We all contain these dual aspects, expressed as love and hate, harmony and chaos, good and evil. This tension is necessary for structure to exist. Human beings are energy structures. Don't be mistaken thinking in terms of negative being bad. An automobile battery is a good analogy. One plate is charged positive, the next negative, the next positive and so on. It's the interaction between the plates that generate the energy, but the negative plate is not better than the positive plate. By relating this to your life you must realize that without tension you don't exist. Thus, there is a need for yin- yang balance in your life. Most people express their yang energy in an undesirable way, such as self-denial, hard work, gambling, dangerous activities or arguing. But your energy can be expressed in a different way, as a positive challenge, and this is best explained in the next law.

38. The law of self-destruction

As a natural expression of the Law of Duality, that which is totally successful tends to destroy itself. This fact is known on a subconscious level. Therefore, people often don't allow their relationships or career or spirituality to become totally successful. If they reach the pinnacle, they greatly increase the potential for self-destruction. Here are some examples:

1. History proves that any country that has ever reached the peak is fragmented and collapses.
2. A couple struggling through many forms of adversity. E.g. Getting the husband through college, sickness, financial problems and family trouble. But eventually, they arrive at a point where everything is going well - and this is when they get divorced.
3. The spiritual seeker who is making profound progress backslides into behaving negatively. A recent fall of the most successful club leaders and television evangelist make this case.
4. A successful business executive who makes it to the top of his profession then has a midlife identity crisis or a nervous breakdown and destroys it all.
5. The man who inherits wealth and destroys himself through dissipation.
6. An honest man who becomes a powerful politician and becomes very corrupt.

In each of these examples, once total success was obtained, there was no more challenge and destruction followed. Subconsciously in each case, they desire to experience the challenge again. Unless you challenge yourself you will stagnate. Remember you are energy and stagnation is self-destruction. Or, energy cannot stand still it must, by its very nature, move forward or backwards. Instead of holding back, always give yourself new and rewarding challenges. If you let the challenge go too far, self-destruction is the result. If you keep challenges in balance, you succeed, maintain your position and retain your success. The secret is to consciously direct challenge in a way that minimises jeopardy and fulfils the yin-yang need of balance. This will usually be accomplished by wise risking.

39. The law of environmental manifestation

Everything that surrounds you is an extension of you, your mate, your home, your furnishings and car, your pets, your yard, your office, and your team, are a physical expression of your attitudes and belief system. Your environment is a picture of your core beliefs and expresses your self-image in a cultural overview.

40. The law of restriction

Man cannot create anything higher than his own level of understanding. Thus, society can never get any better than the level of mankind as a whole. Our systems for social change usually only add new burdens to already ineffective systems. Time has proven that this approach to a new society doesn't work. And our mistake is trying to right the world from the outside in; this is working on the effect instead of the cause and is doomed to failure. Instead, we must work from the inside out. Every one of us on this planet can incorporate the power of harmonious thinking, which is the only long-term solution to poverty and limitation. To heal the world, we must each first heal ourselves.

41. The law of self-worth

You can only attract to you that which you feel worthy of. Your self-esteem is critical to your happiness and success. The truth is you are not what you have, and you are not what you do. Beneath your fear programming, you are perfect—an enlightened soul fully self-actualized, and a living example of unconditional love. It is only lifetimes of fear programming that are keeping you from acknowledging who you really are. The more you can let go of the fears, the higher your self-esteem will be and the more options you will have, and the more risks you can take. The better you like yourself, the better others will like you, and the worthier you will feel.

42. The law of growth

Deep within your centre, at the level of your Higher Self, you know what is best for you, and it will always be to strive for more awareness. Never allow yourself to reach a level of self-satisfaction where there are no new challenges. For many, there will be no growth without agitation or discontent. So, the idea is to carefully study your dissatisfactions, for they will tell you what you are about to leave behind and possibly point to new future directions. Make sure the future is one of happiness and unconditional love.

43. The law of self-truth

Truth is what works for you. If you believe something to be, it becomes truth for you. The idea is to be very careful about what you accept to be, for it will influence all aspects of your life and your future.

44. The law of summarized experience

You are the sum total of all that has ever happened to you in this life and in all of your past lives. Everything from your health, your relationships, your sexual experiences, your developed abilities, your career standing, and everything else. This can be used as a barometer to show who you really are and to tell if your conscious and subconscious are functioning in harmony.

45. The law of belief

You can have anything you want if you can give up the belief that you can't have it. As long as what you want doesn't conflict with someone else's belief. As an example, if you desire a fulfilling growth-oriented, one-to-one relationship, but demand it to be with a particular person, then you are not operating in harmony with the Universe.

46. The law of dharmic direction

You have within you a guiding principle, which is your duty to yourself and society. Karma has directed your past lives and your present life experiences, always urging you to forge ahead into activities and learning experiences to form the character required to fulfil your destiny. You also have the free will to not fulfil your Dharma. But the secret is to listen to your inner direction which will direct you to fulfil your Dharma and resolve your Karma. Your Dharmic direction is natural for you and probably falls within one of seven directions:

1. The work - force and genial occupation careers which include homemakers.
2. Military, including soldiers in all forms of police
3. Service, including most religious work, those in medical and social welfare and metaphysics.
4. Creativity which includes artists, writers, poets, musicians, actors and entertainers.
5. Science, including medical researchers, scientists, technologists, and physicists.
6. Philosophy, including all who presents theories about why man does what he does.
7. Government, including political leaders, from the president through all areas of elected offices.

47. The law of purifying action

By living the Three Pillars of Dharma, you will spiritually evolve. The First Pillar is generosity, meaning non-greed and letting go. The Karmic results of generosity are abundance and deep harmonious relationships with others. The Second Pillar is moral restraint, this includes five basic precepts: not killing, not stealing, not committing sexual misconduct, not using wrong speech, not taking intoxicants which can cloud the mind and make it dull. As an explanation, not committing sexual misconduct means refraining from actions of sensuality which cause pain and harm to others or turbulent so disturbing inner wounds. Refraining from wrong speech means not only telling the truth but avoiding a lot of useless and frivolous talk and gossip. Speech should be gentle, creating harmony and unity between people. The Third Pillar is meditation. And it covers two areas. The first is concentration, the ability of the mind to stay steady on an object without wavering. Second is the cultivation of insight which means to see clearly the process of everything and the nature of Dharma.

48. The law of Karmic access

Karma incurred in one incarnation can be overwhelmingly harmonious or disharmonious. To have it all return in one lifetime would put you out of balance. Therefore, it is dispersed or worked out in more than one incarnation.

49. The law of release

It advises you to let go of anything that is no longer useful, without regrets and without resentment. This includes such things as books, philosophy, clothing, beliefs, your lifestyle, even a club membership, and the list goes on and on. The pleasure should be in the moment of the experience, and when it is no longer useful, by letting go you free yourself to start another learning experience without being bound by the old.

50. The law of ritual

Any act performed repeatedly with specific intent becomes a rite. Each time the ritual is repeated its power is enhanced in three ways:

1. By focusing on the intent, the performer intensifies the power of his or her mind to control reality.
2. The performer gives permission to his guides and the powers on the other side to assist him in the desire of manifestations.
3. Each performance upon the rite draws upon the energy of all who have used the rite throughout all time. As an example: In using the pentacle for protection, the performer draws upon the energy of people over the centuries who have used this right to ward off negativity. Thus, the power increases. If you wish, you may have a new ritual to a quick look at the 50 primary Universal laws and experience the effects it will have on your life.
